„I can see you”

(excerpt)

„Sometimes I ask myself: Am I the one who is thinking or am I just thinking that I am thinking? Anyway, there is work to be done. The way it is, you function, do things that you need to do, and are a legitimate, useful member of society, and most importantly, you don't ask questions. At least not the questions that might bring the truth to light. Instead, you run along and pretend to be original. Is that clear so far? But if the mind becomes cloudy and the soul becomes heavy or you are tired, or if you, God forbid, are sick or what is worse, old, maybe a Roma, or you just can't take it anymore, then you are a problem. You have to function. That's the fact of the matter. It's something we've learned, what we grew up with, what defines us. Or is it? ... I don't know, I just can't remember how it was with me. Anyway, there is work to be done. “
